The Forest Service uses the most current and complete data available. Geographical Information System (GIS) data and product accuracy may vary from map to map. Data and maps may be developed from sources of differing accuracy, accurate only at certain scales, based on modeling or interpretation other than those for which they were created, which may yield inaccurate or misleading results. The Forest Service reserves the right to correct, update, modify, or replace GIS products without notification. The Forest Service will not be liable for any activity involving this information. This map shows all ownerships within National Forest Boundaries. However, management decisions only apply to land managed by the Forest Service, pending partnerships with other cooperating government and local entities.
